

This is the best book I've ever written, and it still sucks (This isn't really my best book) By Jarod Kintz
□ If I told you that my global audience has shot up 100% in the last six months what would you say?
If you were to say "So you went from one reader to two readers?" you'd be absolutely correct.

A Cyclops on a unicycle juggling three giant eyeballs couldn't compare to the balanced vision my writing presents. Arod had these flattering words to say about my writing: "I wouldn't read Jarod's writing—not even if he paid me to read it: And he does pay me to read his writing but that doesn't mean I do: " Of course the quote continued on but that was the only part that was praising, And after I had congratulated you on your keen guess I'd thank you for being 50% of my reading base. This is the best book I've ever written and it still sucks (This isn't really my best book)Ok the goodreads blurb just rocks. I'm not saying that I'm actually going to read this book because I have no idea what it's actually about and don't feel like gambling but yeah. This is the best book I've ever written and it still sucks (This isn't really my best book)

This is it this is my biography: Now that you know my birthday please feel free to get me birthday presents, Notice how I used the plural presents? More than one gift would be greatly appreciated. Appropriate gifts include gold coins bars of silver and large tracts of land (preferably beachfront property). Or you could just buy me a drink—soda natural because I don't drink either alcohol or high fructose corn syrup. Skipping ahead a few years and a few hundred miles we come to Denver Colorado, In the second grade along with English I studied French Spanish and Japanese: Out of all those language classes I remember one word: Andrea. That was my girlfriend at the time the one who left me for my best friend: I guess I remember two words as I remember his name too but his name is almost sacred as a name that shall never be uttered, Right after second grade ended my family moved to Jacksonville Florida. It was Jacksonville that I would come to know as home and would attend the rest of my schooling until college. 0 grade point average from third grade until I graduated from high school. Oh is one of those not a class? No way—I believe art is still considered a class, When not cracking jokes in class I would be doing one of three things: drawing passing notes or sleeping: In high school I started to not only be mentally absent from class but physically gone too: If you count the college classes I took starting my junior year of high school then I got my four year degree in nine years: And if you're going to do something you might as well do it at least twice as well as everybody else—or at least at least twice as long. I graduated with an English degree from the University of Florida but I took creative writing classes from both UF and Florida State University, All though college I fancied myself a fancy man because I was an aspiring writer. In the spring of 2005 I did manage to sell a line of t shirts to Urban Outfitters: I have been rejected by literary agents publishers MFA programs all sorts of women, I have written many "books" and I use the term books loosely, Mostly they are just compilations of my random thoughts and one liners: But I like writing them and people seem to like reading them, and that's what it's all about right? All my books are self published either through iUniverse or the wonderful Kindle program, If there is one thing I like to impress upon people it's that you can do it even if you can't. In fact noted linguist and translation expert Dora J. And the authors rating is funny. this review was pointless. I just wanted to point out that the dude's funny. The story of Jarod Kintz begins now. Let's knock out the trivial first. I was born in Salt Lake City on March 5th. For a few years I attended Mackintosh Academy. The story of Jarod Kintz begins now. Let's knock out the trivial first. I was born in Salt Lake City on March 5th. For a few years I attended Mackintosh Academy. At this point I was a mediocre student. I believe I had a perfect 2. My favorite classes were art P.E. and lunch. I'd skip class like a flat rock skips across a pond. After high school it was on to college. In all I have attended six colleges. I bounced around like a dodgeball on a trampoline. Mostly I wrote t shirt slogans and other pithy things. That is my lone success in life. Seriously. Well so far anyway. But my story is just beginning. I plan on failing my way to success. But still I keep writing. I encourage everybody to write. Share yourself with the world. Just keep can'ting until eventually you can. And you can quote me on that. {site_link}.
