

The Jungle of Surprise By François Boucher Just who was it who sent Monsieur Sergent the quiet and distinguished resident of 11 rue François Ponsart 16th arrondissement an air-mailed letter from Hong Kong? wonders Léonie the caretaker of that exclusive building when she finds it in her batch of morning mail. Book The Jungle of surprise Taking on the role of reluctant private investigator Léonie attempts to discover the links connecting Monsieur Sergent to this forgotten world uncovering strange ghosts along the way: Bouillon and Vallée the railwaymen; Claret-Llobet the rogue; Wawa the little devil; and Pah the touching young girl... while at the same time trying to deal with Inspector Fleurus of the Paris CID impeding her progress and with other intruders inviting themselves into the inquiry, Book The Jungle of surprise Curiosity though has a well-known consequence for cats and it won't be long before the same result mars the pretty marble floor of a flat close by, Book The Jungle of surprise gov One cannot it seems disturb the shady past of a remote old French colony in South China: that of Fort-Bayard with impunity[1]

Paris 1958. The Jungle of Surprise

