

Kill Your Darlings, April 2016 By Rebecca Starford Jones' insightful look at modern Australian politics through the lens of Narcissistic Personality Disorder to Maggie MacKellar's words on the routine of personal writing - and everything in between - this was a great spread of engrossing thought-provoking pieces. Kill Your Darlings April 2016 Good writing as ever but overall I didn't find this issue as compelling as the previous one - it took me a while to get through it whereas I devoured the last. Kill Your Darlings April 2016 Kill Your Darlings April 2016

Rebecca Starford is publishing director of Kill Your Darlings magazine and author of acclaimed memoir Bad Behaviour: A Memoir of Bullying and Boarding School which is currently in development with Matchbox Pictures for adaptation into a TV series:

A mixed bag some wonderful stories in there I loved around half worth reading Kill Your Darlings April 2016 Another awesome edition of KYD, The Culture Files section does tend to lose me a bit but I'm a happy reader nonetheless, Particularly of note were the essays right at the start: The Generation Games by Jane Caro and The Hungry Lucky Country by Sarah Coles. From S.A. Kill Your Darlings April 2016 Great issue. Emblematic of everything I love about KYD. She lives in Brisbane with her partner and son..