

Erythra Thalassa Brain Disrupted By Annette Libeskind Berkovits Her stories and poems have appeared in Silk Road Review: a Literary Crossroads; Persimmon Tree; American Gothic: a New Chamber Opera; Blood Thunder: Musings on the Art of Medicine; and The Healing Muse. Her first memoir In the Unlikeliest of Places a story of her remarkable father's survival was publ Annette Libeskind Berkovits was born in Kyrgyzstan and grew up in postwar Poland and the fledgling state of Israel before coming to America at age sixteen. Her stories and poems have appeared in Silk Road Review: a Literary Crossroads; Persimmon Tree; American Gothic: a New Chamber Opera; Blood Thunder: Musings on the Art of Medicine; and The Healing Muse. Her first memoir In the Unlikeliest of Places a story of her remarkable father's survival was published by Wilfrid Laurier University Press in September 2014 and reissued in paperback in 2016. {site_link} OverviewA searing portrayal of a mother's anguish over the sudden hemorrhagic stroke of her son—devoted father of two young girls—rendering him a quadriplegic in the prime of his life. Courage in the face of such an event is easy to recommend but mustering it is a heroic feat that takes every shred of psychic emotional and physical power—every single minute every single day. " William Shakespeare Erythra Thalassa Brain DisruptedA heartbreaking collection of prose poems telling a story from a mother's point of view; she witnesses her splendid son diminish struck by ruptured vessels that spilled his blood a brain hemorage. Whether you are a caregiver a parent a child or simply someone who is thinking about what it means to be human in a time where our collective health landscape is changing each day this is a book worth reading. The poems are powerful descriptions of her changing emotions; she expresses feelings that all of us can understand; fear anxiety dread guilt lack of faith joy in little improvements and lovely moments. It's full of emotion as she expresses her own irrational feelings of guilt and her yearning for the years when he had been young and healthy and a source of pride; as she explores her prayers and hopes for goals which become progressively smaller until a quiet murmur of affection or a purposeful glance is a triumph; luck is relative and not absolute,

Annette Libeskind Berkovits was born in Kyrgyzstan and grew up in postwar Poland and the fledgling state of Israel before coming to America at age sixteen: Despite being uprooted from country to country Berkovits has channeled her passions into language study and writing: She has published two memoirs short stories selected poems and now The Corset Maker a historical novel, Despite being uprooted from country to country Berkovits has channeled her passions into language study and writing: She has published two memoirs short stories selected poems and now The Corset Maker a historical novel: Her second memoir Confessions of an Accidental Zoo Curator was published in April 2017. In her three decade career with the Wildlife Conservation Society in New York she spearheaded the institution's nationwide and worldwide science education programs, Her achievements include the first ever agreement to bring environmental education to China's schools, The National Science Foundation has recognized her outstanding leadership in the field. An intimate glimpse of a world shattered by stroke in which each poem not only illuminates but reimagines life with hope and acceptance, Strokes sudden bolts of lightning can strike seemingly well people of all ages. The results can range from mild for the lucky ones to the devastating like the massive brain bleed that changed our son's life forever, One must possess not only optimism that the future will be better but a faith in science God or both, In the darkest days when my son's life teetered in the balance for weeks then months I was a roiling cauldron of emotions; writing helped. Somehow pouring out my heart made the burden more manageable. I hope it tells a story of a mother's emotional struggle the son's courage and his small physical achievements. To a healthy person "graduating" from nothing by mouth to a few tiny ice chips is nothing but in an epic fight to live such tokens of progress feel like towering feats, If this little volume eases the stress—even a tiny bit—of watching a loved one on the brink than the sea of tears will not have been entirely in vain: She observes his condition and the response of aides doctors family and begs the Lord for mercy caught between pleading and anger. The story is told in a straightforward touching manner by Annette Berkovits; a chronical of pain: 9780998757827 Both a powerful testament to the complexity of grief and a bold act of love these poems trace one woman's journey after tragedy strikes. 9780998757827 Any parent and anyone experiencing grief or loss will relate to these lovely poignant poems. What I found most profound was the message that hope and meaning can be found in the unlikeliest of places if we open our hearts. Make you grateful for all the the little things we take for granted especially in 2020, 9780998757827 A moving beautiful collection of poetry that explores the author's journey as she navigates a family crisis. 9780998757827 Absolutely from the heart: a harrowing cycle of poems on the brain haemorrhage which disabled the writer's son, This heartfelt anthology will resonate deeply with anyone who has faced a sudden catastrophic illness in a loved one. 9780998757827 Brilliant collection that will give you a greater understanding of grief and tragedy. Erythra Thalassa: Brain Disrupted is her first poetry chapbook. Erythra Thalassa: Brain Disrupted is her first poetry chapbook. IntroductionAny stroke is a tragedy. And not just his but all his loved ones. One must consciously decide to be a survivor. I kept writing through my son's ordeal. Eventually the collection of poems found its own arc. "Everyone can master grief but he that has it. 9780998757827 Now available for preorders on Amazon. Release date: November 12 2020<https://www.amazon.com/Erythra-Thalas>. 9780998757827 A book written from the heart. Fantastic! 9780998757827.